Sharing perspectives from IPLC and artisanal small-scale fisheries from around the world.

The objectives of the side event

- To amplify the voices of artisanal small-scale fishers in territories of life that are conserved by Indigenous peoples and local communities and allows them to express their vision and efforts for marine conservation and responsible artisanal fishing.
- To provide an opportunity for rights holders and custodians of traditional marine territories to express the enormous challenges they face in maintaining their autonomy, governance, resilience and cultural identity, all things that are essential to achieve the conservation of the Ocean in the long term.
- To provide UNOC attendees the opportunity to reflect on what it means to promote marine conservation under a human rights-based approach, including guaranteeing effective participation of the interested parties and protection of human rights.
